

Beáta Farkas is Professor and Head of Institute of Finance and International Economic Relations at the University of Szeged, Hungary. She is Vice President of the Committee on Economics at the Hungarian Academy of Sciences. She joined the university after obtaining degrees in both Law and Economics, and now holds a PhD in Economics. She was the founding Dean of the Faculty of Economics and Business Administration. Her research interests are comparative institutional analysis and European integration. Her recent publications include a book, "Models of Capitalism in the European Union" (Palgrave Macmillan, 2016), an article "Market Economies of the Western Balkans Compared to the Central and Eastern European Model of Capitalism" (Croatian Economic Survey, 2017) and two book chapters in one book "Central European relations in turbulent times" and with András Máté-Tóth "A rift in European integration? Neglected shadows of the Central and Eastern European transformation" (Routledge, forthcoming).